Names
&
Aliases](#)

All applicants for admission to practice law in California who are eligible for a social security number are required to provide a social security number pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 30 (State of California's tax enforcement provisions) and 6060.6 and Family Code Section 17520 (Child Support Enforcement Programs). Applicants without a social security number because they do not qualify for one, may request that they be exempted from the requirement of providing one at the time they register.

Legal Education

Pre-Legal Education

California lawyers can meet the legal education requirement in different ways. Most receive a Juris Doctor (JD) degree from law schools registered by the State Bar (California-accredited) or approved by the American Bar Association (ABA). But there are other ways to get a legal education.
